

Referees

As with most professional journals, the IBM Systems Journal follows the practice of using the peers of authors as referees to review manuscripts. Usually three referees evaluate each manuscript, with one referee chosen from outside IBM. In selecting a manuscript for publication, the editors rely heavily on the advice of these referees, who voluntarily contribute their time and expertise to assist in maintaining the standards of the Journal. The referees remain anonymous, so that authors do not know the source of advice, comments, or criticism received on their manuscripts.

On behalf of our contributors, editors, and readers, we periodically express appreciation to our referees publicly. At this time we thank those listed below, who served as referees from March 1981 through March 1985. Although we endeavor to maintain a complete list of our referees, we apologize if we have inadvertently omitted someone.
